The Senior Class
of Winchester-Thurston
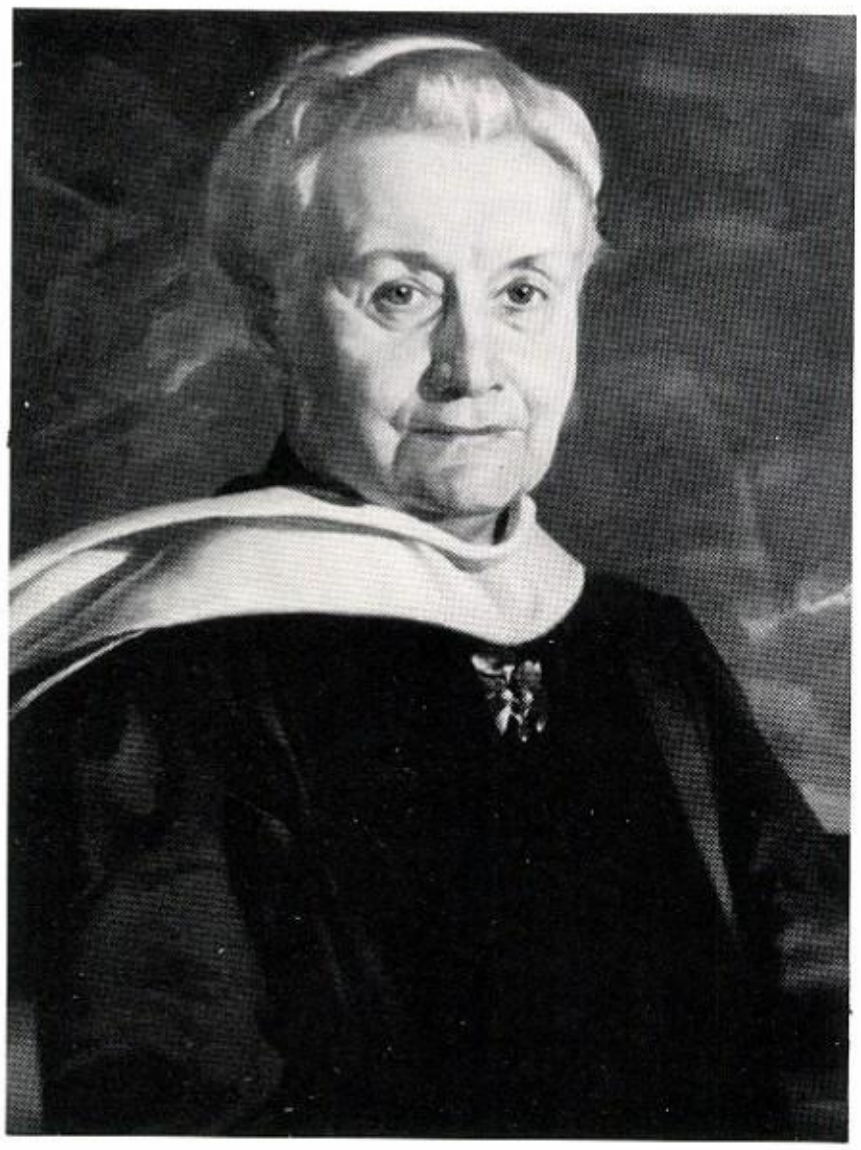
Presents the 1961

Thistledown

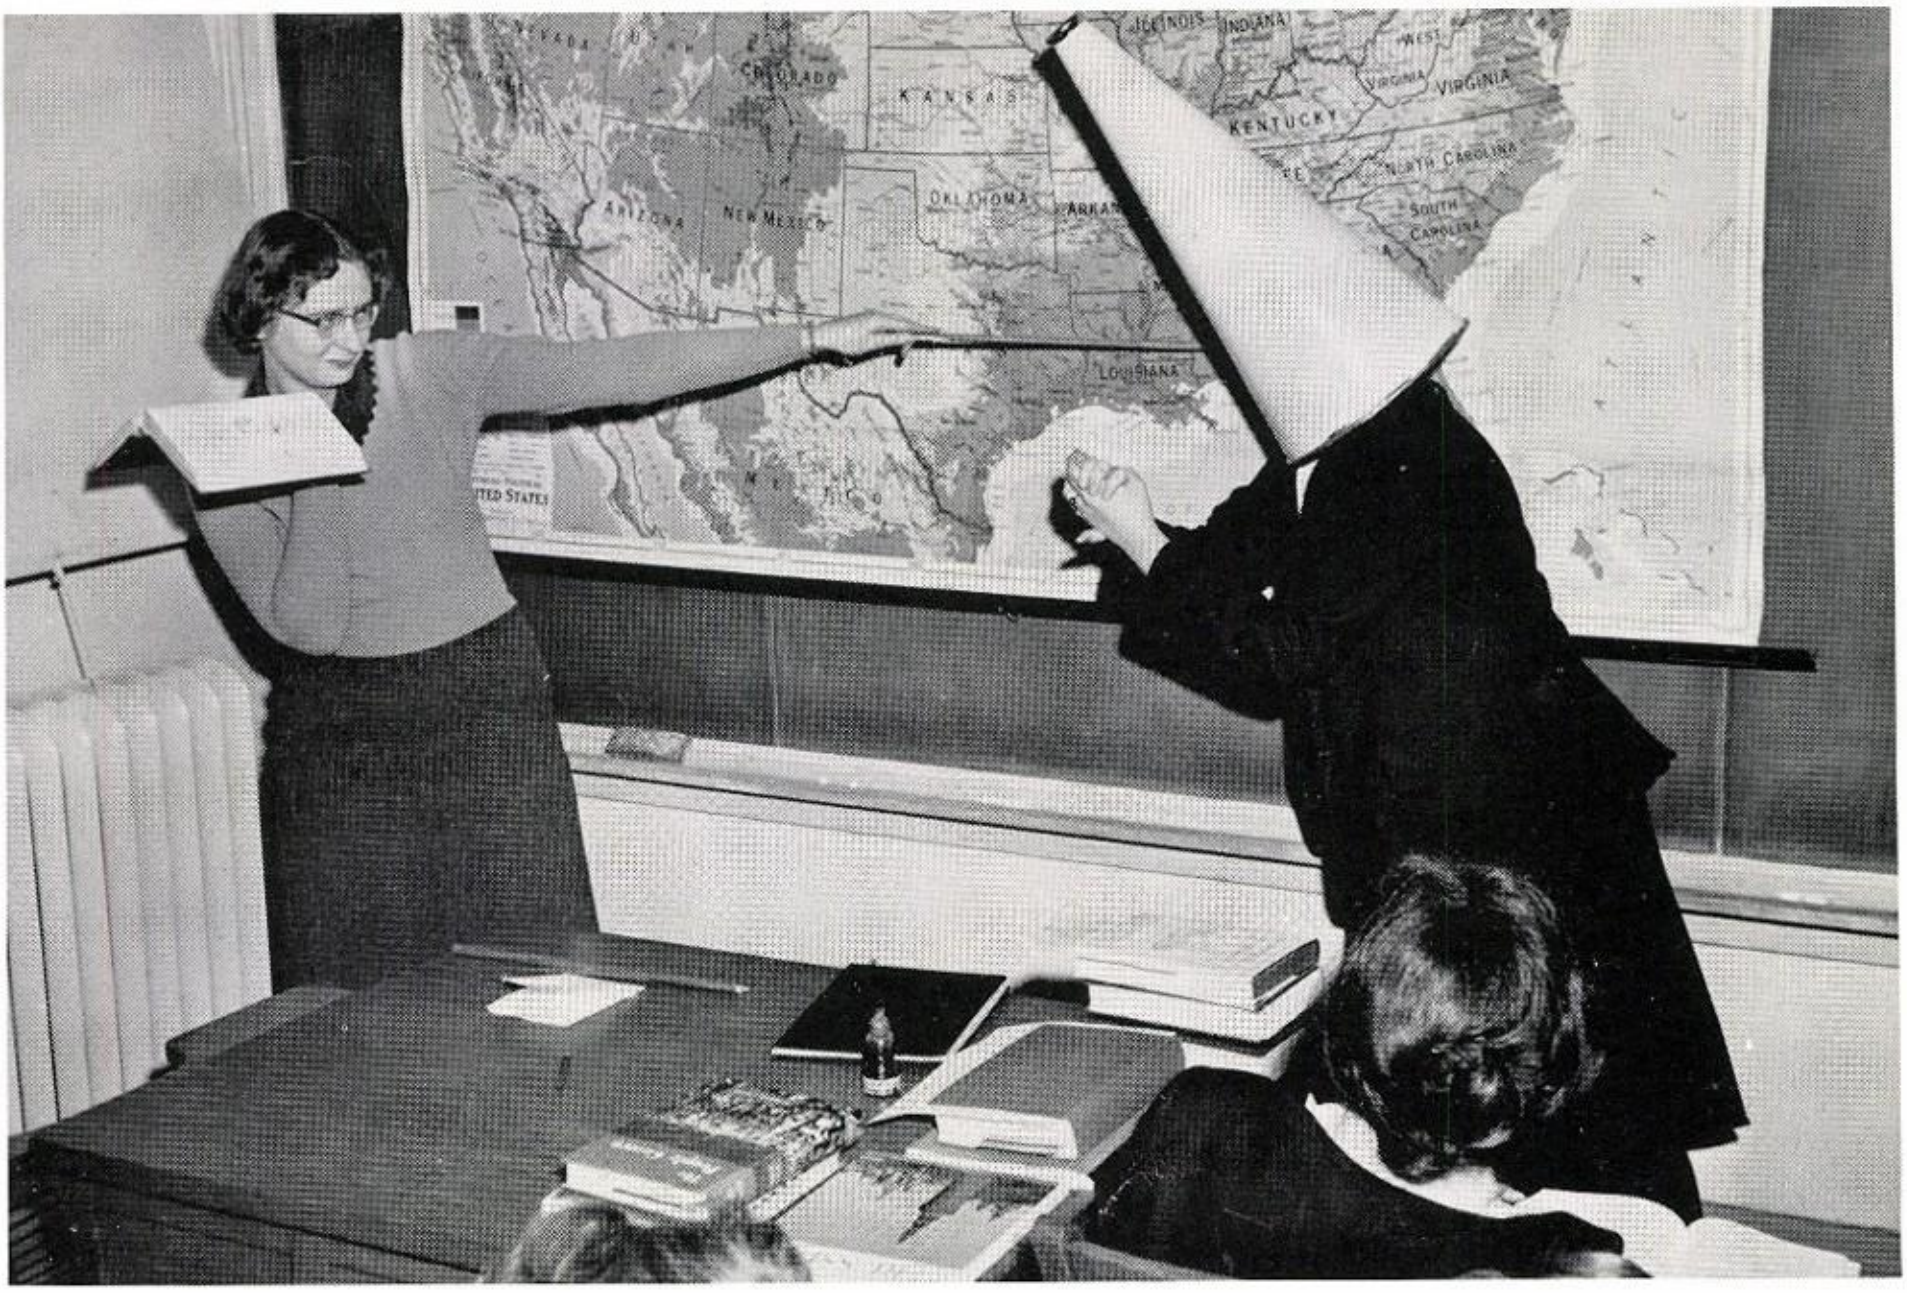


Foreword

School is so much a part of us and our thinking that we seldom realize its great significance in our lives, until in senior year we are suddenly confronted with new and serious thoughts. We begin to understand the depth and meaning in old ideals, to find the complexity and joy of knowledge, to learn the beauty and giving of self that is true friendship. At the same time the surface of our school life takes on tender, more symbolic meaning. We can feel the spirit of Winchester in small things: in the silent morning prayer, in sunshine and copper-red oak leaves outside senior study hall windows, in the chatter of voices that follows the momentary hush after the bell. The things we love are often most vividly recalled by the mere suggestion of a mood, a mood as elusive and deceptively simple as a piece of drifting thistledown that bears someone's deeply felt wish. Perhaps that is why the yearbook is named Thistledown —for it shows only the bright surface of our school life, yet this stirs the deeper memories of our hearts.

M. A. K.

The Thistledown Staff of 1961 extends sincere thanks to Mrs. Beard, our faculty advisor, and to Mr. Gene Burke of the Taylor Publishing Company, for their generous advice, assistance, and cooperation in producing this yearbook. We also thank Mr. Jonas of Jonas Studio for his excellent handling of the formal and group photographs, and Nancy Jenks, Mary Alice Henninger, and Anne Witting for their contributions to the informal photography.



Dedication

Frankness and complete sincerity command the respect of her students. Her delightful sense of humor animates an everyday lesson and makes her class one we anticipate. She brings a freshness of approach to her subject that finds surprise in the ordinary and points out the incongruities of everyday life. Her intelligence is founded firmly in understanding, and a sense of mathematical logic makes her impartial, critical, and open-minded. Her classroom emits bursts of laughter heard throughout the school, but she seldom laughs aloud and tries to keep a look of "no nonsense" that belies her joie de vivre. While she takes the roll call, she is often seen in a pleated skirt, a pastel sweater, a strand of pearls. To the admired, appreciated, and dearly loved Marilyn Denton, the senior class dedicates the 1961 Thistledown.

Student Council

Every senior class makes its unique contribution to the school. The seniors of 1961 hope that they will be remembered as the class that started student government at Winchester Thurston. In October the entire upper school took the following pledge: "I pledge to uphold the ideals and good name of the school at all times. I shall do my best to be honest in my school work, and to be thoughtful of others, to respect the authority of the teachers and monitors, and to develop self-discipline." Sally Feland and Mary Alice Henninger were elected to head the student government and to enforce the rules set up by Student Council. Any new system needs time to become respected and effective. We have made mistakes with our honor system, but we are learning from our errors. We leave to the underclassmen this new system, believing that it will become a truly fine expression of democratic school government.

THE SENIOR HYMN

Now the day is over,
Night is drawing nigh,
Shadows of the evening
Steal across the sky.

Jesus, give the weary
Calm and sweet repose;
With Thy tender blessing
May our eyelids close.

When the morning wakens,
Then may we arise
Pure, and fresh, and sinless
In Thy holy eyes.

Memories

— Frankly Candid

THE TWENTY-THIRD QUALM

The professor is my quiz master; I shall not flunk.
Beside empty desks he leadeth me;
He showeth me to an alternate seat; he restoreth my fears.
He hath led me on the stony paths of knowledge, for a grade's sake.
Yea, though I know not the answers to the test, I will fear no failure, for the class is with me.
Class average will comfort me.
I have prepared my answers in the sight of my roommates;
I anoint my book covers with crib notes; my time runneth out.
Surely grades will follow me all the days of my life,
And I shall dwell in the class forever!

Au Revoir

It is time for our class to leave the school which has become a vital part of us all, and we find it more difficult than we had ever expected. At times, when our work seemed impossible, our problems insurmountable, and our morale at rock bottom, we have longed to escape to the "independent and carefree" life at college. Only now are we beginning to realize how false this concept was, and that our lives will be full of problems which we, as mature adults, must solve independently. Although we are unsure of the life which lies ahead, we are confident that we will be able to meet any demands or obstacles if we keep foremost in our hearts the ideals Winchester-Thurston has given us. By sharing mutual pleasures, interests, and goals, we, who were once an unorganized group of individuals, have drawn together to form a close-bound unit; yet, in so doing, we have not forfeited any of our inherent individuality. Our memories will not be of ourselves but of our class—of working together on the Follies, or singing Silent Night for the last time. Cooperation with others has taught us to develop our own strength, and we are now prepared to go our separate ways. But we say to our friends and to Winchester-Thurston "au revoir" instead of "good-by," for we will meet again, many times and many ways.
